Reference: [REDACTED] B/3

The following terminal experiments, considered to be responsive to [REDACTED] A requirements as well as operationally feasible, are suggested:

I. Test of ability to withstand interrogation.

F A. An English-speaking [REDACTED] agent selected from among [REDACTED] personnel will be recruited (unless recruitment has already been effected) and trained on a [REDACTED] controlled base for a mission directed against the [REDACTED]. F The agent's mission will be to pose, under false documentation, as a leftist [REDACTED] for the purpose of collecting a) BI on [REDACTED] personalities in [REDACTED]; b) information concerning channels of communication, command and infiltration of bodies into the [REDACTED]; and c) information on the structure of the [REDACTED] organization in the [REDACTED]. F He will be informed that should the [REDACTED] security agencies take an interest in him or arrest him that this will in the long-run be advantageous to his cover. Along with his training will go certain medical treatments covering [REDACTED] practices. B/3

F The agent will be dispatched to the [REDACTED] and soon after his arrival there [REDACTED] will be tipped off by the [REDACTED] that the individual is, according to our files, a dangerous [REDACTED] communist agent. F Our relationship with [REDACTED] is such that, having a legitimate interest in this apparent operation, we can select the [REDACTED] case officer who will conduct the interrogation of the prisoner (there are two or three capable [REDACTED] case officers who have been trained by the [REDACTED]). F We are also in a position to place, with the knowledge of [REDACTED], [REDACTED] equipment to monitor the interrogation. He are further in a position to go over each day's [REDACTED] with the [REDACTED] officer and advise him on the step-by-step conduct of the interrogation, including methods employed. We can introduce a new [REDACTED] operator under medical cover to attempt to break down the work done by the original [REDACTED] operator.

This can be covered with [redacted] by reference to last year's [redacted] experiments F in the [redacted]

In the event that the agent should break down and admit his connection with U. S. intelligence, he can a) deny this absolutely and advise the agent's disposal, or b) indicate that the agent may have been dispatched by some other organ of U. S. intelligence and that he should thereafter run the agent jointly with [redacted]

II. Test of ability of [redacted] techniques to cause a person to react in a manner contrary to his innate loyalties and motivations.

A. It has become evident that at least a portion of the [redacted] traffic operators who were refused entry into [redacted] will continue to refuse to be sent to [redacted]. He should select one or more from these irreconcilables who have families in [redacted] with whom they wish to be reunited. This individual or individuals will be subjected to [redacted] techniques. As a result they will return to [redacted] of their own free will. We will arrange to have their families transported to [redacted] Again, as a result of [redacted] techniques, upon their reunion with their families they will completely reject their wives and children. At a later date this block can be removed.

B. There are available in [redacted] numerous former [redacted] operatives who are anxious to get back into the intelligence business on [redacted] basis. These persons make frequent contacts with [redacted] and service elements for the purpose of getting themselves on U. S. payrolls. He would approach one of the more notorious of these individuals and indicate to him that, subject to his making certain preliminary arrangements, he would consider entering into an arrangement which in effect would name him as principal agent for the group of intelligence operatives known to and controlled by him. Great care would be taken to avoid any commitments or appearance of commitments. He would request the [redacted] agent to designate his next loyal follower and would act as a condition precedent to further dealings with the [redacted] agent the requirement that this [redacted] agent be treated by us for one month on the understanding that any operation in which he would be engaged would be run jointly by the [redacted] agent and ourselves. The [redacted] agent would be taken advantage of by [redacted] and [redacted] the black color into [redacted] (Recessed) and treated in basic discipline techniques. This agent would also undergo certain physical treatments covering [redacted] procedures. On a plot of [redacted] and indicated that in [redacted] other announcement of the agent indicated his basic loyalty to the [redacted] agent, the
